Emoticons

An emoticon is a simple picture that we can make with the symbols on a computer keyboard. The picture looks like a face and it shows how we are feeling. For example, :) means 'I'm happy' and :(means 'I'm sad'. Why? Turn the symbols to the right and you can see the little faces!

² _____

People often use emoticons in emails and Internet chatrooms. You can also use them for instant messaging and on mobile phones when you text a message to your friends.

³ _____

Making emoticons is easy. The most popular symbols are : or ; for eyes, o for a nose and (or) for a mouth. You can also use x for a kiss, zz for sleeping and zero 0 for bored. And you can use other symbols to invent your own emoticons.

⁴ _____

Emoticons are a simple way to send a message to another person. They're quicker than typing a sentence, and they mean the same in any language!

⁵ _____

These are small pictures that people use in instant messages. They look like cartoon faces. You can choose the emoticon from a menu or sometimes they appear automatically when you type the correct symbols on your keyboard.

1 Read about the animals living in Australia and answer the questions.

Australian animals

Australia has lots of unusual and interesting animals. The most famous Australian animal is the kangaroo. It's a marsupial. This means that the female has a pouch at the front of its body for carrying its baby.

Kangaroos are big animals. An adult is about two metres tall. They don't walk or run, they hop. A kangaroo can travel nine metres in a single hop!

The koala bear is also a marsupial. It has a large, round head and furry ears. It eats leaves from eucalyptus trees. It's a very lazy animal. It often stays in the same tree for days.

The possum looks a bit like a mouse, but it can grow as big as a cat. It lives in the forest and eats leaves. Possums have a long tail, which they use to move from tree to tree. Like the kangaroo and the koala bear, the possum is a marsupial.

Another interesting Australian animal is the emu. It's a bird, but it can't fly. It's very tall. An adult grows to 1.8 metres and weighs about 60 kg. An emu egg is ten centimetres long!
